- Reviewed By THE HINDU, December 1, 2009, p.13, reviews 'The Central Problems of Bhartṛhari's Philosophy' "as a unique work that view language as awareness and analyses cognition as expressed by language' While discussing the various concepts, the views of Classical Indian Philosophers and contemporary Western Language Philosophers have been analyzed. The word theorists arguments, counter arguments and the reply from Bhartṛhari's side have also come in –depth analysis".
- Reviewed by Ajay Verma, Published in SUMMARHILL: IAS Review, A Review Journal of Indian Institute of Advance Study, Simla, Vol. XIV, Nos.1-2, 2008, Edited by Peter Ronald de Souza, remarks "By the way of general comment on the book I believe that it is by far the most complete and comprehensive work on Bhartṛhari's Philosophy that has hitherto been published in one single volume. The book is not only rich on lucidity of the exposition of the main concepts in Bhartṛhari's Vākyapadīya but is equally rich on an account of polemic among different schools. Prof. Tiwari has given the western perspective to the problem, wherever, it seems necessary and possible. His experiment with reverse chronology namely, from sentence to the word-meaning, I think facilitates the readers towards a better understanding of the issues at hand. the book is replete with references giving clues to the reader for further reading. Overall I think this book is milestone as far as studies of Bhartṛhari's philosophy are concerned."
- Reviewed by Prof. N.S.S. Raman, published in INDIAN JOURNAL OF ANALYTIC PHILOSOPHY, Centre of Advance Study in Philosophy, Utkal University, Bhubneshwar 751004, Orissa. Edited By P.K.Mahapatra and A.K.Mohanty, Volume IV, Number 1, September 2010, Pp.142-146. The journal reviews - "D.N.Tiwari is the first academic philosopher to undertake a philosophical interpretation and is pioneering in this respect. D.N.Tiwari's work fills a wide gap in the study of the history of Indian Philosophy. Historians of the Indian Philosophy like S. Radhakrishnan have totally ignored Bhartṛhari. I notice however that Tiwari does not make a departure from tradition and does refer to Advaita Vedānta at many places... The book under review is quite original in the sense that for the first time the author deals with and investigates cognitive holistic understanding of language on the basis of his interpretation of Vākyapadīya and its commentaries by Bhartṛhari himself on Brahmakānda, Puṅyarāja on Vākyakānda and Helārāja on Prakīrṇakānda. I congratulate D.N.Tiwari on his profound interpretation of Philosophy of language. I believe this will be read by all serious students of philosophy.

- Review of Ganesh P. Panda for National mission for Manuscript, pgs 77-79.

‘ the work of the present author has tries to cover up almost all the theories and concepts available in the Vākyapadīya on the basis of their kārīkā’s with the help of the authentic commentaries wherever so necessary. Thus, he has created another mile stone in the history of the study on Bhartṛhari’.

Reviews and Abstracts from the Reviews on this Book

- Reviewed by Vedika M Hurdoyal for Journal of East-West Thought, An International Journal of Association of East-West Studies, USA, Editor in –chief –Prof. J. Z. Ding, California, Vol.6,No. 1,Summer 2015,pg.89-97,Summer 2015,USA

‘The author is a distinguished philosopher widely known for his works concerning philosophy-proper. The work under review is, perhaps, the first one after Indian Independence that deals with Indian philosophy without intermingling it with metaphysical and religious allegiances. It provides with not only a philosophical outlook of popular philosophical trends but also presents a critique of cognition in the light of recent advancement in the field. It is really a work of perpetual importance for analyzing the cognition as it flashes by language.

The comprehensive discussion on the problems of language, being and cognition presented in a contemporary perspective, I am sure, is a landmark in Philosophical studies from the cognitive holistic perspective. It is also an excellent incentive and excitement to scholars, students and the general readers interested to go deep into the refreshing and precise discussion on the issues of language, meaning and cognition. It is in brief, a philosophy proper without intermixing any metaphysical, religious entities or their allegiances. This comparative presentation of the issues at full length in the book - as warranted by the advancements in philosophical thinking of the east and west - is an inspiration for further research and examinations in the field’.

Reviews and Abstracts from the Reviews on the Book-

Review article on the volumes by Professor Ananda Misra, published in Journal of East-West Thought, ISSN 2161-7236, pgs 67-69.Vol.9. March 2019, quoted passage from p.79.

‘Cognitive holism emerged in Tiwari’s discussions in the volumes under review is a trend of philosophy potential enough to be learnt for an updated and fresh insight into the problems of philosophy. I observe Tiwari’s interpretation on active theory of knowing, the infusion of language and cognition, concept of intelligible being, the problem of identical cognition, arguments against proposition as abstraction, autonomy of language, determinate versus indeterminate cognition, dichotomies of interested and disinterested, analytic and indivisible, verity and validity of cognition, difference between Being and being, between objects of cognition and cognition itself and controversy over language between the word-theorist’s and the sententialist’s, his argument of language oriented against meaning oriented philosophies are philosophically precise and consistent, attractive and outstanding. Arguments, discussions and evaluation of concepts undertaken in the book and his style of differing or agreeing with rival theories are commendable. The author’s perception of cognitive holistic interpretation and his claim that cognitive holistic approach to philosophical problems, I am sure will attract the philosophers in time to come.’

Reviewed by Ankit Chourasia, for Indian Philosophical Quarterly, Journal of the Department of Philosophy, Savitribai Phule Pune University, pgs.125-132., vol.45, No.6, Oct-Dec.2018,

“I have observed Tiwari’s discussion in all the chapters based on primacy of language against meaning centric philosophy very consistent and successful in understanding the problems of language and cognition. ---undoubtedly, these set of two volumes in modern idioms shows originality of his thinking and that is philosophically very interesting. The reflective approach of the book carries challenges and widens the scope for philosophical researches in the field”.

• Reviewed by Professor Raghunath Ghosh, for Journal of Indian Council of Philosophical Research(JICPR), 2022, Springer, New Delhi

‘After independence it is first book, I read that unlike subjective and objective thinking about metaphysics and epistemological entities, reflects on all problems from cognitive point of view and its author claims his approach to problems is an attempt to concentrate and analyze cognition as it flashes by language. I have reasons to say that in the history of Indian and western philosophy these volumes are fresh addition, a new perspective of reflecting on the problems, a philosophy that is cognitive holism for which our knowledge, philosophical investigations and reflections on the problems are not only based on but are confined to language and the meaning it expresses. The encyclopedic set of these two volumes of ‘Dynamics of the Language’ by Tiwari is a new contribution to the field of philosophy-proper in general and philosophy of language and meaning in particular’.

49. What exactly does the word 'Brahman' signify according to Sankara? Does it signify an individual or a universal or both? If it signify an individual, is it devoid of descriptive content? If it signifies a universal, What is it? Is it a mere generic form, a generic characteristic or generic idea? what is its logical status? Is it Legitimate to ask, what exactly does the word 'Brahman mean when it is beyond all the linguistic categories? Does every word for Sankara mean a universal? If Brahman is devoid of descriptive content how it is to be identified?
50. Can we significantly refer to the things that are not there? Does the act of signifying put its performer, that is, one who utters the performance in touch with what it signifies?
